

follow accounts of things you are passionate about! you never know what new opportunities or inspiration you will find.

when you dress YOUR best, you're always dressed to impress. check a mirror before you go in--wash your face or check your makeup!

Practice Makes Perfect

try to practice responses to interview questions. go live with your friends and interview each other--see what feedback your friends have for you!

even though making worldwide friends online can be fun, exciting, and informative, make sure you are not sharing any personal information with them. never share your address, phone number, or other identifying information on any of your social media pages or with online friends you've never met in person before.

DID YOU REALLY DELETE THAT?

PROBABLY NOT.

want to make your mark after the interview? send a handwritten thank you note to the person who interviewed you thanking them for their time and reflecting on the conversation you had. this is a good thing to do for anyone writing you a recommendation, too!

the most important way to make yourself stand out is to be you. if you stay true to yourself, you'll be sure to leave a lasting impression.

even if you've deleted something from your public profile, that doesn't mean it is gone for good. that's in the terms and conditions no one reads.

be yourself

WHAT IS SOMETHING THAT YOU ARE GREAT AT THAT YOU MIGHT HIGHLIGHT ON SOCIAL MEDIA OR IN A RESUME.

i always feel like somebody's watching me.

Your boss and college reps aren't the only people who will search for you on social media. Your potential coworkers or roommates will too. Make sure what they see represents you well.
